On Thursday, 11 October 1973, the Intelligence Operations Subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Appropriations met with CIA Director William E. Colby to review the National Security Council Intelligence Directives. The Subcommittee found no inconsistencies between these Directives and the basic legislation which established the Agency and set forth its functions and responsibilities.

While certain aspects of these Directives must of necessity remain classified, Chairman McClellan asked Director Colby to prepare an unclassified statement covering the Agency's activities. Mr. Colby said that he had already begun work on such a statement and as soon as it is completed it will be forwarded to the Committee.
